Gender Sensitization gives a clear and precise view about gender and help to understand that gender is not about "women" it's about "people". She pointed out that gender sensitivity is enacted through a process known as gender sensitization. Gender sensitization promotes equality for men and women by allowing men and women to view what is stereotypical and reasonable for their gender. She further stated that gender sensitivity can be achieved by conducting various sensitization campaign, training centres, workshop, programmes etc. She explained that education is a vital tool for bringing about gender parity and simultaneously catalysing national development. Gender sensitization make people understand the difference between sex and gender, how gender is socially constructed and the stereotypes around gender roles helps them determine which assumptions is a matter of gender are valid and which are stereotyped.
